FUTURE OF WORK

Agents are optimising AI workflows, but humans remain key to ROI

Mauro Arruda, director of AI solutions and services and EMEA leader at Lenovo, shares insights on the shift toward agentic AI and what organisations need to make it work in practice

The AI landscape has undergone a fundamental shift. While organisations have struggled to extract maximum value from AI, many are becoming more proactive with their approaches and seeing the ROI potential in agents.

The opportunity

- ✓ Rapid experimentation
- ✓ Reimagined workflows
- ✓ Real ROI from AI and tech investments

...but most businesses aren't there yet.

The AI Productivity Paradox Leaders Need To Solve

AI is making employees more productive, but leaders must turn those gains into organizational performance while preserving human judgment and redesigning work.

The roadblocks

- ✗ Old workflows, with AI tacked on
- ✗ More output, less oversight = increased risk
- ✗ Reduced judgement = slopidemic
- ✗ Growing divide between power users vs casual users

To create AI ROI in 2027, everyone must work with intention, judgement, and control.

Upskilling must deliver business impact. But traditional enterprise learning is broken.
